Mrs. Stofor Entertains

Charming in their Hallowe'en motifs were the beautiful luncheons given on Wednesday and Friday of last week by Mrs. Albert Stofor at her palatial home in the country. The interior was a bower of loveliness, fall flowers of various colors decorating both floors, and baskets of blossoms were used on the veranda. On the dining table, tied with a huge bow of tulle, was a large silver basket filled with ferns and yellow and white dahlias. The card tables were set with individual motifs, the place cards and favors carrying out the black and gold scheme. In the center of each table was a Hallowe'en vase filled with delicate yellow and white flowers to suit the occasion. A most delightful luncheon was served, consisting of a meat course, ices, salad, sandwiches, candies, etc., characterizing the efficiency of the charming hostess. Following the luncheon Wednesday the guests enjoyed an afternoon of "500," while on Friday interesting games of "Rook" were played. Mrs. Stofor's invited guests included: Mesdames Grover Anderson, Roger Barnes, John Botts, Frank Boyd, Walter Bridges, Marion Bridges, Percy Bryan, John Robinson, Sam Carrington, Emma Chenault, W. C. Clay, J. Will Clay, C. T. Derrickson, C. B. Duerson, Allen Prewitt, J. C. Graves, Chas. REDUCED PRICES

Having decided to retire from the mercantile business, I have sold my entire stock of goods to Omer Staton, who will take charge of my store November 1. I am now having reduced prices on all my goods, including dry goods, groceries, hardware and notions. Everything goes at a fraction above cost. I can save you money. Come in and see our low prices. F. D. RICHARDSON.

THE SICK

John Beeraft, who suffered a fractured leg several weeks ago, is now able to be out.

Harry B. Ringo, popular merchant, who has been quite ill with typhoid fever, is improving slowly.

Mrs. H. R. Prewitt, who has been ill with pneumonia, has sufficiently recovered to be able to be out.

Capt. Ed. N. Woods is critically ill at his home on East Main street, and his daughter, Mrs. W. S. Sanders, of Atlanta, Ga., has been notified to come to her father's bedside at once.

"UNCLE" JOHNNIE GRANT DIES

"Uncle" Johnnie Grant, widely known here, who formerly made his home at the Old National Hotel in this city, died at a hotel in Louisville one day last week. Mr. Grant had many friends here and the news of his death will be received with much regret. He left property, consisting of mountain land, valued at $60,000, to his daughter in Scotland.

TO THE VOTERS

I take this method of announcing myself as a candidate for re-election as a member of the County Board of Education.

I know there has been considerable criticism of the amount of money that has been expended by the board as well as the methods and character of the expenditures. These things are matters of public record and every expenditure should have the spotlight of publicity turned on it. I have not always voted with the majority of the board on certain expenditures and I ask the people to investigate my record in office before deciding on how they will cast their votes. I have lived in Montgomery county all of my life and if elected to this office will endeavor in the future as I have in the past to render the best possible service of which I am capable, regardless of political or factional differences. If you believe I will give you an honest, clean administration I will be grateful for your support and influence. FRANK M. LOCKRIDGE.

PROPERLY FED EWES PRODUCE BEST LAMBS

Ewes which are properly fed from now until lambing time and are in good condition when that period arrives are more apt to give birth to sturdy, vigorous lambs and to have the necessary amount of milk to make their offspring grow rapidly than those which are poorly fed during the coming months, sheep specialists at the College of Agriculture say. Being well fed and having an adequate supply of milk the ewes are less likely to disown their lambs than are the thin, improperly nourished ones. Although the ewes should not be given a fattening ration they should be kept in rather high condition from now until lambing time, according to L. J. Horlacher, sheep specialist of the college.

Ewes which have a considerable reserve of fat when the lambs are born come through the suckling period in better shape than poorly fed mothers since this is a period when the demands on them are so great that they frequently fail to maintain their weight in spite of the fact that they may have been well fed. So important is the matter of having the animals in good condition that in case a few of them are thin at the end of the breeding season they should be placed in separate pens and given an extra amount of feed, the specialists say.

Grass pastures, oats or wheat stubbles and corn stalks may be utilized for feed during the fall months. Sheep should be turned on these fields as early as possible because the feeds deteriorate rapidly in feeding value due to rains. While early-sown rye is good to furnish succulence and causes the ewes to take exercise it is not a substantial feed and does not have much fattening power.

Ordinarily it is profitable to begin feeding the ewes a little hay and grain about one month before lambing time and it is sometimes advisable to begin even earlier. Unless the ewes are exceedingly thin they need not receive more than one-half pound of grain each day. Whole oats have been found to be a good grain feed. Another good grain mixture is composed of equal parts by weight of oats and bran. Corn alone should not be fed unless a leguminous hay such as clover or alfalfa is being fed. A small amount of corn mixed with oats and bran may be fed without harm. Such feeds as bran and linseed meal while beneficial are usually too costly to add to the ration. It is usually advisable to make use of the poorer grades of roughages before lambing time and save the best grades for the ewes to eat while the lambs are young.

BIRTHS

On Friday morning, to the wife of John Rassenfoss, Jr., a daughter—Mary Alice.

On October 14, in this city, to the wife of Frank Collins of Owingsville, a daughter—Neva Barnes. Before marriage Mrs. Collins was Miss Nellie Vice, daughter of Mrs. M. V. Vice, of this city.

ROAD NEWS

Mr. R. G. Kern is in receipt of a letter from Hon. H. G. Garrett, of the State Highway Commission, which states:

"We have had the division federal engineers to approve your project by their recommendation to the road department at Washington and just as soon as we get their approval and you get your right of way completed it will be advertised for construction immediately."

MRS. TABOR BUYS FITZPATRICK PLACE

The home of the late W. T. Fitzpatrick, Sr., was sold at public auction, as a whole, to Mrs. Russell Tabor, Saturday afternoon for $14,000. The property is very desirable and is considered well worth the money. The sale was cried by Auctioneer William Cravens.
